Course Description

This course is designed to introduce you to a variety of perspectives and approaches used to understand, explain and influence behavior of organizations and of people in organizations. Since scholars and practitioners from many disciplines and fields have tried to understand and explain behaviors of organizations and of people in organizations, we draw from writings from many disciplines and fields. These include public administration, political science, business management, sociology, Psychology, industrial administration and even biology. This course is designed to help you expand your understanding of organizations and people in them by exposing you to several different ways in which they can be (and have been) perceived. For effective administrative action and practice, a good understanding of the concepts and theories underlying practice is indispensable. This course is designed to help you understand the basis of administrative practices and to become more effective and reflective practitioner.

Class Participation.
Read the article assigned. Come to class prepared to discuss the readings. Each student will sign up to give a presentation and lead a class discussion of the reading assignments for any one week. Maintain an active and thoughtful involvement in class discussions and other activities. Bring in newspaper clippings, articles, columns, cartoons, ideas, thoughts, etc. that pertain to our study of organizations to share with the rest of the class. Your success in this class is directly related to the extent that you and others come to class prepared and ready to share your ideas.

You may miss one class without affecting your participation grade. Additional absences will result in one-half letter per absence deducted from the class participation grade.

Lack of preparation will be treated as an absence. Late submission of written assignment will result in loss of one-half letter grade per day.
